

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

V. A Letter from Dr George Hickes, dated May the 22d, 1700. to Dr Sloane, concerning the Saxon Antiquity, mentioned N. 247. of these Transactions. With an account of his Book now in the Press at Oxford.

S I R,

AMong many other happy accidents, that have attended me in my undertaking, to lay open the ancient Septentrional languages, and what hath been written in them, I cannot but reckon this for one, that by your means I came to the knowledge of that curious piece of Saxon antiquity, which is in the possession of that worthy and honourable Gentleman Sir Nathaniel Palmer, of Fairfield in Somersetshire, which Country he hath the honour to represent in this present Parliament. Of this antiquity you gave the world some account the last year from the learned Dr Musgrave, in the Philosophical Transactions, N. 247. with the Sculpture of the upper side of it, and the Saxon Inscription about it. I was writing the xxii Chap. of my Saxon Grammar de dialecto Normanno-Saxonica, when those Philosophical Transactions came out, and as I happened to impart the design of it to a Gentleman, who hath studied the ancient Northern languages, he told me of that antiquity in them, and when I came to view the Sculpture of it, I presently observed how useful it would be to me in one part of that Chapter, wherein I give an account of the alteration that K. Alfred made in the Saxon hand. Upon this, Sir, I made bold to apply my self to you for a further account of the antiquity, for which you referred me to Dr Musgrave, to whom by your encouragement I sent a Letter of Queries; to which he did me the favour to send a full answer, the substance of which I have printed in the Chapter of my Book above-mentioned, with two of the three draughts he sent me of it, and with an explication of that Inscription in the Saxon tongue. There you will also find my Conjecture about the Picture, which is surrounded with the Inscription that in the original shines in Letters of Gold. The air, the shape of the face, and the two united Scepters in each hand of it, made me then think that probably it might be that of our blest Lord, but having since seen a Picture of St Luke in a most ancient Latin MS. of the Gospels, all written in Capitals, with such like Scepters in each hand, I am inclined to think that this was the common way in those times of drawing, or representing Saints among the Saxons, and that the Picture in K. Alfred's antiquity (for so I now call it) might be the Picture of his Patron St Cuthbert, whom he, and his Mother both in one night dreamed they saw, and heard speak the same words, in which he told them he should conquer the Danes, and be a great King, and bid him be of good courage. This vision of St Cuthbert happened to him after he was beaten by the Danes, and had retired in great distress into ATHELNEY, where this Antiquity was found, and he was so affected with it, that he afterwards used to tell it all his life long, and ascribe his success over the Danes to the merits of St Cuthbert; and upon second thoughts this inclines me rather to believe that it may be the Picture of that Saint, who of all others of their Country shined brightest in the Saxon Calendars, and I shall give an account of this second conjecture in the Preface to my Book, with a Sculpture of St Luke's Picture, in that MSS.
ap-

which belongs to the R. the Dean and Chapter of Lychfield ; and which for its great antiquity is commonly called St Chads book. This story of St Cuthbert's appearing to K. Alfred is at large in William of Malmsbury, to whom I refer you for further information ; and as the King used to commemorate the vision he and his Mother had of him, so it is very likely he ordered his Picture to be made in the manner it is represented in my Book, to hang down by a string upon his breast, for a constant memorial of the Saint, who appeared to him, to bid him give the Danes Battel in a time of great despair, when he looked upon himself as conquered, and thought his Kingdom almost lost. That he caused the Picture to be made is plain from the Saxon Inscription.

AELFRED ME: HETT GEWYRCAN

Aelfredus me jussit fabricati.

And that it was made to hang down upon his breast, is plain from B, the cone or apex of Fig. 1. where the Golden Pin is represented in a manner different to what it is in Fig. 3. on purpose to shew that the original was made to hang in a String. And that the original is a true and genuine piece of Antiquity is also clear beyond all reasonable doubt, not only from the place where it was found, the place of K. Alfred's retreat from the Danes, which he fortified in time of War, and where he built a Monastery in time of Peace, but also from the Inscription, which is all, except two, in Roman, or Gallo-Italic Letters, which the King, who was bred at the English School in Rome, preferred before those of the Saxon duct ; and when he came to be King, as Ingulph testifies, he brought them into use. Some I hear have suspected this Antiquity, because of its extraordinary artifice, which they think too fine for that age. But it is not to be doubted, but that K. Alfred, who was

was so great a Prince, could easily procure the best Artists of all sorts from foreign parts; as from Rome, where he had his education, and whither the best Artists resorted from Greece, and all other Countries, or from the Courts of the Eastern and Western Kings of France, in which he was in great esteem, or indeed from any other parts of the Christian World, by the correspondence, and interest which he had at Rome. I have now, Sir, as you desired, given you my thoughts of K. Alfred's antiquity, which I pray you to impart to the worthy Dr Musgrave, to whom I think my self much obliged for his excellent answer to my Letter. And I should also proceed to give you some account of my Book, which is now in the Press at Oxford, under the care of a very ingenious, and virtuous Gentleman, who to his exact skill in the learned languages, hath added the knowledge of the ancient Northern tongues, and is a great and successful promoter of both among the happy youth, that are under his care. But, Sir, I must entreat you to accept of a short general, instead of a more particular, and longer account of it, which perhaps I may give you another time.

The Title of it is as follows.

LINGUARUM VETT. SEPTENTRIONALIUM
THESAURUS GRAMMATICO-CRITICUS ET ARCHÆOLOGICUS.

Accedit

Catalogus librorum Veterum Septentrionalium, tam eorum qui excusi sunt, quam qui in Membris Scripti nondum eduntur, quam fieri licuit, locupletissimus.

I need say nothing to you of the reason of this Title, who in one Chapter have seen besides K. Alfred's Antiquity, and three curious Runic Alphabets, whereof two

two are explained in Saxon, above ten other Sculptures, with about thirty Saxon, Dano-Saxonick, or Normanno-Saxonick Charaters, never before printed, which are all produced to shew the changes and alterations of the Saxon Tongue, in its Writing, Words, Phrases and Syntax.

The Catalogue mentioned in the Title, will be made (God willing) by the most skilful person, I think, in the World; who hath done me and the publick the favour to promise me to finish that part of my undertaking; and in order to it, he hath already been at Cambridge, and taken a Catalogue of all the Saxon MSS. there, to my perfect satisfaction; and now by the favour of his Superiours, is doing me the same service in the Library of Sir John Cotton. But besides all that which the Title imports, I am now making a dissertation of the usefulness of those languages, which will furnish me with many theories, and in which I shall print many originals, of which some are prepared, and others preparing for the Press, by some of my Learned friends and acquaintance, who are so generous as to assist me in this work. The series of Saxon Coins in Sculpture, with explications which an honourable person gave me leave to promise the world in his name, will also make part of that dissertation, of which I have already written twelve large sheets; and I receive great encouragement to proceed in it from the free communication of MSS. from several Worthy Persons and Societies, which indeed makes my Book rise to a greater bulk than I at first expected, and very much encreases both my pains, and the cost. But as I have in a manner devoted my self to this work, so I am content to take any pains to illustrate the Northern Languages and Antiquities, which have not yet been set in their true light; and I hope thereby to bring the Northern & NorthWest parts of Europe to a correspondence in Antiquity, which, I hope, will be one good effect of my Book,

Book. Some learned German Gentlemen, as Mr Palthenius, and Schilter Syndic of Strasbourg, are already very inquisitive after it, and some learned Danes and Swedes, who have seen it at Oxford, have already given me thanks for it ; and their encouragement, with that I have met with at home, and hope still to meet with, inspire me with vigour in my undertaking, which I hope in due time to bring to an happy end. There are already above XC Sheets printed off, and no diligence is wanting to dispatch it, as soon as it can be done. I have already mentioned how much I am beholden to some excellent Persons and Societies for the free communication of their MSS. to whom I shall make my acknowledgments, with all respects, as publick as my Book ; and I entreat you, Sir, from whose care and culture all sorts of Learning receive great advantage, that if you hear of any persons who have any Saxon MSS. or any Normanno-Saxonick Monuments of Antiquity till the Reign of Hen. II. you would entreat them to communicate them to me. And because you tell me some curious persons of your acquaintance desire to have a sight of my Book, I entreat you to tell them, that to oblige them, I intend e're long to have as much of it as is printed sticht upon bands, and lye in Mr Keeble's Shop, at the Turks-head in Fleetstreet, that it may be seen by them, and all other curious persons who have a kindness for that sort of Learning, and have a mind to know what I am a doing towards the promotion thereof. I thank you, Sir, most heartily, for all the encouragement and assistance you have given me, and with a very great sense of my obligations to you, I take leave, and subscribe, Sir,

Your most Faithful Humble Servant,

George Hickes: